The Inspector General's report on Andrew McCabe has opened a Pandora's Box on attempts by intel officials within the Department of Justice who tried to influence an ongoing investigation into the Clinton Foundation. You really can't make this stuff up! The focus is on an August 2016 phone call from a high-ranking Justice Department official who Mr. McCabe thought was trying to shut down the FBI's probe into the Clinton Foundation at a time when Hillary Clinton was running for president. No kidding! It's amazing just how politicized the government intel agencies have become. It seems like every day there's another crooked former Obama administration official or an intel agency slime ball being exposed...

The report says that a DOJ official was "very pissed off" at the FBI and demanded to know why the FBI was still pursuing the Clinton Foundation when the Justice Department considered the case dormant.

ROGUE DOJ PHONE CALL:

Former FBI officials said the fact that a call was made is even more stunning than its content.

James Wedick, conducted corruption investigations at the bureau, said during 35 years there he never fielded a call from the Justice Department about any of his cases. He said it suggested interference.
